

Beauty of a Woman BlogFest: Tips for a Rad Post Festers Will Love

Choose a compelling title!

You're welcome to include The Beauty of a Woman BlogFest in your title, but it won't stand out from the others in the list if that's all you include. Get creative, and give us a taste of what you've written.

Write from the heart.

Whether your post is serious, funny, educational, poignant or entertaining, the strongest entries consistently come from a place of heartfelt authenticity.

Don't aim for "perfection."

Go easy on yourself, and have fun! The fest draws a very accepting, encouraging crowd who'll want to cheer you on, sans judgment.

Keep in mind that all formats are welcome.

Standard text posts, videos, poems, artwork and even fiction work are a-okay!

Not sure what to write? Consider one of these prompts:

Original	Girl Boner
"I feel most beautiful when..."	"I feel sexiest when..."
A love letter to something you've considered one of your "flaws."	A turning point in your sexual journey
A tribute to a truly beautiful person in your life	A sexuality myth you want to debunk
Beauty standards: how you feel about them, what you'd like to see change	Your "coming out" story
An experience that taught you a lot about real beauty	An experience that taught you a lot about sexuality
A letter to your younger self about beauty	A letter to your younger self about sexuality
An empowering message for anyone who's been bullied, based on appearance	An empowering message for anyone who's been sexually bullied

<http://www.augustmclaughlin.com/boaw2017reg/>